New FDA chief cites promise of harder-to-use pain drugs

Matthew Perrone, AP Health Writer

The Food and Drug Administration's new commissioner is pledging to fully back efforts to develop harder-to-abuse painkillers, part of a sweeping government effort to reduce deadly overdoses tied to prescription pain medications.

Dr. Robert Califf told a panel of FDA advisers on Tuesday, March 1, that his agency alone cannot solve the crisis of prescription drug abuse. But he pledged to do "everything possible under our authority to prevent abuse, save lives and treat dependence."

Last week, the Senate confirmed Califf to head the FDA, overcoming objections from some senators that his agency has not done enough to combat painkiller abuse.

Dr. Califff will be a keynote speaker during the Rx Summit Opening General Session on Tuesday, March 28, 2016.

'Chasing Heroin' - Inside an epidemic

PBS Frontline

Frontline Investigates looks at America's heroin crisis in a fresh and provocative light - telling the stories of individual addicts, but also illuminating the epidemic's years-in-the-making social context, deeply examining shifts in drug policy, and exploring what happens when addiction is treated like a public health issue, not a crime. The 2-hour documentary first aired a few weeks ago.

Commentary: Physicians must turn the tide of the opioid epidemic

Steven J. Slack, AMA President

We have a defining moment before us - the kind of moment that we will look back on in years to come as one in which we as a profession rose to the challenge to save our patients, our families and our communities during a time of crisis.

Our nation is needlessly losing thousands of people to a preventable epidemic, and we must take action for our patients.
